Capital Substitution in an Industrial Revolution

Peter Berg*

Department of Physics, NTNU 7491 Trondheim, Norway

April 7, 2019

${\bf Abstract}$

here

Keywords: Growth, Industrial Revolution, Capital, Substitution

JEL classifications: N10, O41

 $^*$ Corresponding author: peter.berg@ntnu.no

| $g_0$  | ξ    | $g_y$ Distant Past | $g_y$ Distant Future |
|--------|------|--------------------|----------------------|
| 0.0011 | 0.8  | 0.95               | 0.66                 |
| 0.0022 | 0.8  | 1.81               | 0.75                 |
| 0.0033 | 0.8  | 2.67               | 0.85                 |
| 0.0011 | 0.96 | 1.00               | 1.00                 |
| 0.0022 | 0.96 | 1.88               | 1.12                 |
| 0.0033 | 0.96 | 2.76               | 1.24                 |
| 0.0011 | 1.2  | 1.09               | 2.20                 |
| 0.0022 | 1.2  | 1.99               | 2.41                 |
| 0.0033 | 1.2  | 2.90               | 2.63                 |

Table 1: text here

1 Introduction

2 Model

2.1 Model 1

- 1. The high rate...
- 2. here...

As mentioned in the subsection 2.1...

$$\sigma_t = \sigma_0 e^{g_\sigma t},\tag{1}$$

In equation (1)...

Sam is in Figure ??...